

Think PINC

Thought experiment: 'The majority of people in the UK become sentientists'

Working in small groups, use your imagination and your learning from this unit to explore how the UK might be different if the majority of people become sentientists.

I
Intriguing
The idea raises some interesting points and questions like:

Use the structure below. Start by developing three to five ideas in the following categories:

- positive implications
- intriguing/questionable points
- negative implications.

After discussing with students in other groups, can your group agree on conclusions, or are there still some diverse opinions?

P
Positive
This is a good idea because...

C
Conclusions
Could it work?

N
Negative
This is a bad idea because...

Following this group activity, write your own blog post, 300–500 words, with title 'Sentientism: A Worldview for the Future of Humanity?' In your writing, you should evaluate and express your own view on the value of sentientism as a worldview.